The three panel discussions will focus on a variety of work/life, diversity and marketing initiatives related to people with disabilities and their families.

In addition to our event's host sponsor, General Motors Corporation, gold-level sponsors* currently include CVS Caremark, KPMG and FlexPaths, LLC.

The event will take place on July 22, 2008 at General Motors' global headquarters on the Detroit Riverfront. It will culminate with a luncheon where the 2008 Disability Matters corporate winners in Marketing, Diversity and Work/Life will be honored. The last session of the conference will focus on corporate interaction and collaboration. It will be open to all corporate participants who are interested in learning more about what programs last year's winners are currently implementing to assist people with disabilities, and discuss the potential of joining forces for a year-long focused corporate initiative to support people with disabilities in the workplace. Ultimately, this session will lay the foundation for next steps. We hope you will join us for this closing discussion and future plan development. GM will also host an opening cocktail reception for all honorees, sponsors and attendees the evening of July 21.

In 2007, GM received its Disability Matters Award for its GM Mobility program, which makes automotive transportation easier and more accessible for the millions of persons with disabilities and their caregivers. "GM is dedicated to improving people's lives by making our vehicles accessible and attractive to customers with special needs with disabilities," said John Gaydash, director of marketing for GM Fleet and Commercial Operations. "One of the key elements in maintaining independence is a person's mobility."

This conference will also take place in conjunction with the national celebration of the 18th anniversary of the Americans with Disabilities Act. Conference registration is now available online at www.disabilitymattersawards.com. The site also provides information on the Disability Matters Awards program and sponsorship opportunities.
